About the Editor

John Day is a Michigan-based editor and publisher who has written extensively about the automotive electronics industry. Earlier in his career he covered Boston’s Route 128 for Electronic News, and he wrote about new semiconductor products as a senior editor at EE Times. Mr. Day has a bachelor’s degree in liberal arts from Northeastern University and a master’s degree in journalism from Penn State.